Base Pay<sup>1</sup>

Approach

How are base pay decisions made?

Talent leads receive a base pay increase budget, and then decide on base pay increases considering an individual's skills, impact and their position in the base pay range. Budgets for base pay increases are determined in each country, taking into account local business, economic, and talent market context. Our commitment to our people continues in FY23 through investing in promotions, benefits, well-being, learning, and compensation. For December, we have prioritized promotions and base pay increases for people with the most critical skills. Talent leads may not be able to award an increase to everyone, every year based on business and talent priorities and the budget available.

Bonus<sup>2</sup>

How are decisions on bonuses made?

Talent leads personalize bonus awards considering an individual's impact and achievements over the past year. They use insights from the talent discussions and award the highest bonuses to those who have had truly distinctive achievements. Keep in mind that as individual performance varies from year to year, bonuses are likely to vary from year to year as well.
